Make me an instrument in your story

I wrote last week how each of us has an essential role to play in God's story of salvation. That God wants to bring about his plan through our daily yeses in cooperating with God's grace to bring his gospel and him into our little corner of the world. Every one of us has been given gifts and talents that Jesus wants to perfect and use for his greater honor and glory. I believe that we all want to give a generous yes to the Lord, that flows from a series of smaller yeses. So, how does this happen?

I think that the first place to start is asking God to open our eyes to see him at work in our lives each day. A very helpful prayer for this is the Examine prayer that St. Ignatius developed. It takes around 5 minutes to look over the day to see where was God present through the graces that he gave. For example, maybe you saw a stunning sunrise as you were going to work that made you awe at God's beautiful creation. Maybe there was something at work that clicked along perfectly or that worked better than good planning could account for. Maybe someone said something to you that lifted you up or encouraged you. These graces can be simple little things that made you pause or moments that filled your heart with gratitude. Similar to a spouse sending a quick text to another that just says, "I love you." That little gesture of love can make your whole day. The Examine prayer asks the Holy Spirit to help us be aware and notice all of the little graces or gestures of love that God gives us each day that are specific to us. Another resource to learn more about this prayer is look up Fr. Timothy Gallagher's podcasts about the examine prayer on this website: https://www.discerninghearts.com/catholic-podcasts/fr-timothy-gallagher-the-examen-prayer/.

This Examine prayer shows even more of the scandal of the Incarnation. For Jesus did not only become man for us, but he desires to be scandalously close to us throughout the day in whatever we are doing. I think that as we become more attentive to little moments where he gives himself generously to us, we can then also notice when he wants us to be his instruments in his plan of salvation. We become instruments by saying yes to some things and no to other things. When we say yes to choices that help us to grow in virtue, and no to things that lead us into habits of sin (vice), those choices help us to become better instruments. They help us to say yes to Jesus. The things that we do that help us to grow in prayer, lead to greater yeses. The foundational piece to growing in prayer is consistently showing up, just showing up is a yes.

We also give various yeses when we help others to grow in virtue, their faith, and their love of God. "God said, 'it is not good for man to be alone.' (Gen 2:18)" The times that we can build up and strengthen one another on this journey of faith, also sets our own faith on fire. For example, a variety of the saints helped one another to strive for greater holiness. St. Andrew brought his brother St. Peter to meet Jesus. St. Ignatius of Loyola was inspired by the life of St. Francis of Assisi. Saint Augustine was mentored by Saint Ambrose. The list is endless.

We all have an essential role in God's plan of salvation. We want to say yes to God's plan by giving little yeses throughout the day. I believe that the starting point is to notice where God is at work in my day through the Examine prayer. As I begin to notice and become aware of how God is at work in my life, then I can respond to his promptings to help others to grow in their life of faith as well. The things that help us to give those yeses generously are growing in virtue and growing in prayer. These make us sharper instruments for the Lord to use to bring about his plan for salvation.
