Waiting at the Gate

I am not sure if this is true or not, but I pray that it is. I had a priest tell me once that one of the graces of heaven will be that when we walk in, we will be greeted by all of the people whom we have assisted in getting into heaven. Whether it is a vast multitude or even just one soul, how joyous that meeting will be. That I will get to see all the people that God has brought to heaven through my daily yes to be his instrument. It is because of both my bigger "yes" to be his priest, but also the little "yeses" each day to strive to become a better instrument for God to use as he sees fit.

I notice that there is this longing and yearning in my heart to get to see the bigger picture, and I cannot wait for the veil to be pulled back at the general judgment. I long to see how all of these seemingly insignificant moments to me culminate into God's plan of salvation. I think that a cross that the Lord gives to priests, to keep us from growing too proud, is we often do not see the full impact of all that we do. This cross is not only for the ordained priests, but for all of us who share in Christ's priesthood through our baptism. We are all called to be instruments of bringing God's grace into the world that we live in, and bringing the joys, sufferings, and struggles of our world back to God at the altar.

St. Paul writes, "So we are ambassadors for Christ, as if God were appealing through us. We implore you on behalf of Christ, be reconciled to God. (2 Cor 5:20)" I have written about how by our yeses, we cooperate with God's plan of salvation. It is by these yeses that we become the ambassadors for Christ. Jesus wants us to be his ambassadors not only by our words, but also by our deeds, for words without accompanying deeds are empty.

Some ways that I may do this, if I am blessed with children, do I seek to live out the promises that I made at their baptism, namely being the first teacher of the faith to them? For example, do my children or others get to see me praying and preparing for mass every Sunday? Does my family see me making it a priority to frequently go to confession? Do I seek to help out in the life and ministry of my parish, whether that be assisting with building up the liturgies or other ministries in my parish? Do I seek to assist with the faith formation program either by teaching or assisting in the classrooms? Am I willing to visit the homebound and be trained to take communion to those who are physically unable to make it to mass?

Do I seek to do the corporal works of mercy: feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, clothing the naked, sheltering the homeless, visiting the sick, visiting the imprisoned, or burying the dead? Do I do the spiritual works of mercy: counsel the doubtful, instruct the ignorant, admonish the sinner, comfort the afflicted, forgive offenses (willingly), bear wrongs patiently, and pray for the living and the dead? Especially in this month of November, the Church reminds us to pray for the dead, and to assist them with our prayers. It is also important for us to teach our kids to do the same so they can pray for us when our time comes.

As I said, I'm not sure if it is true, but how beautiful it will be if when we stand before Jesus in heaven that we would be greeted by everyone who we assisted in getting into heaven. How humbling it will be to see how our yeses to be a daily ambassador for Christ was lived out through our prayers, words, and works of service to our family, friends, and parish. That will be our joy in heaven, to bask in God's unending love and glory, and to give him thanks and praise with everyone who we assisted through saying yes to being ambassadors for Christ.
