Love and Truth- part I

I once described learning philosophy as learning a different language. Sometimes, it is because one is using big, thirty-dollar words to describe certain things. However, a lot of other times it is learning how to be precise with language, like learning to use a scalpel instead of a large hunting knife for cutting. Another thing that philosophy taught me was when you were having a discussion with someone, to define your terms. This means make sure that both of you understand the term that you are discussing to mean the same thing. If you are using the same words, but they mean different things, then you will end up talking past each other, and both will be lost.

I have noticed that this is true with the terms Truth and love because what we Catholics mean by these terms is radically different from what our culture means by them. As Catholics when we speak of Truth, we understand that there is an objective Truth that is outside of us. God is Truth itself. We are then trying to align our thoughts, beliefs, and understanding with this Truth. Taking it one step further, our thoughts, beliefs, and understanding are correct when they align with the Truth, and they are incorrect when they do not.

This way of speaking about the Truth can sound very grating to our modern ears, for our culture does not describe truth as something external to us that we need to conform ourselves to. Rather, our culture says that "I will decide what is true for me." Our culture tries to make it so that I am the one who gets to decide ultimately what is true rather than aligning my beliefs with the Truth. We see this mostly in the areas of faith and morals, but this idea of deciding our own truth, also known as relativism, is creeping into other areas as well. The culture's definition of truth can at surface value sound more freeing, but put bluntly, it is not. When we become the decider of what is ultimately true or not, we lose the ability to discuss and debate ideas with one another. In this cultural understanding, my "truth" becomes my identity. The two become wed together and are inseparable. This is a huge problem because saying that an idea or belief is wrong is an attack on that idea and is thereby a personal attack upon me.

If we believe that the Truth is outside of us, then you and I are free to debate whose idea is more closely aligned with the Truth. You may also discover that both are wrong and need to align ourselves with the Truth. We can look at the evidence around us, logically test the various ideas, and any idea that did not conform with the Truth is a bad idea. We then have the freedom to adjust our thinking and ideas because they are not married to my identity. For example, just because you have daddy's belt and momma's drapes to make a superman cape, you still do not have the ability to fly, so jumping off the backyard shed is a bad idea.

It is vitally important for us to understand that as we are seeking to grow in knowledge, faith, and understanding, we are seeking to conform our ideas and beliefs to the Truth. I am asking the question, does my thought, belief, or understanding conform with the Truth rather than saying, "I will decide what is true for me." The first example is what we hold as Catholics, while the second is what our culture incorrectly seeks to do. It is vitally important because Truth is the foundation for love, freedom, and so much more. So, as we seek to define what Truth is, God is Truth itself, and I am striving to know and conform myself to what he has set forth.

Through your support of the Annual Diocesan Appeal, the Veritatis Splendor Institute (VSI) prepares Catholics across the Diocese of Rapid City to live and share their faith more fully. Together with the commitment of participants, your generosity helps foster vibrant parishes, faithful families, and disciples who joyfully serve.

FORMING MISSIONARY Disciples

VSI offers a place where participants deepen their relationship with Christ, build authentic community, and become better equipped to share the Gospel.

"As a cradle Catholic in a very rural setting, we didn't have access to very much faith teaching. I yearned to deepen my knowledge of my Catholic faith... I felt a tug in my heart to go deeper. I feel that attending VSI has done this for me. I have learned new ways to pray, and each year the prayer group becomes a faith family. I also need to mention that going as a group from St. Anthony's, Buffalo, is a great gift also. We carpool and we talk about the VSI classes, the homework, the retreats, we pray together. Sometimes the weather can be questionable, since it's a 2-hour trip, but the Lord always provides, and it's a blessing to do it together as a parish family!"

- Meria Sperle (VSI 2025-26), St. Anthony Parish, Buffalo

STRENGTHENING Families and Vocations

The fruits of VSI extend into the home, enriching marriages, nurturing children in the faith, and encouraging vocations through families rooted in Christ.

"Sitting in a small formation group, praying together, sharing how the Holy Spirit is moving in our hearts, and diving into Church history – I found myself part of a larger faith family. One moment that captured this beautifully was watching the sisters care for our baby daughter while my wife and I studied. That is the Body of Christ made visible. VSI has been a gift for our whole family. Our four children love coming to Terra Sancta – the library, the woods, the playground. Yes, there were sacrifices. We missed some sporting events. But those sacrifices helped refocus our priorities in ways we are deeply grateful for. Formation even gave my wife and me the trust and surrender to discern and welcome our fourth child after eight years of waiting on God's timing. If you are on the fence, here is what I want you to know: VSI is one day a month. One day to go deeper, to let your belief and knowledge of the Church grow roots. It is absolutely worth it."

- John Talcott (VSI 2025-26), St. Joseph Parish, Spearfish, Candidate for the permanent diaconate, expected ordination, June 2027.
